

Chris Warhurst has a BA (Hons) in Sociology from the University of Durham and a PhD in Organisation Studies from the University of Central Lancashire. He is Professor of Labour Studies and Co-Director of the Scottish Centre for Employment Research at Strathclyde University Business School. His research, teaching and publications focus on labour market and labour process issues. He has sole, co-authored and co-edited more than 10 books and published in academic and popular journals in the UK and internationally. He was also commissioning editor of the New Horizons public interest reports and is a co-founder of the Scottish think-tank Big Thinking. He is recipient of a number of ESRC awards and various other research contracts from the public, private and voluntary sectors. He also sits on a number of advisory groups for the Scottish Executive, Scottish Enterprise and the Joseph Rowntree Trust.

Webpage <http://www.hrm.strath.ac.uk/staff/list/warhurst-chris.cfm>